Anne Evans - A Pioneer in Colorado's Cultural History

THE THINGS THAT LAST WHEN GOLD IS GONE

Barbara Edwards Sternberg

Barbara Edwards Sternberg was born in England. She has a B.A. in Sociology from the London School of Economics. Emigrating to the United States with her husband-to-be, architect Eugene D. Sternberg (1915-2005,) she came with him to Denver. Barbara was awarded a Teaching Assistantship to complete her Master's degree in Urban Sociology at DU. While raising five children, she taught courses in urban sociology and race relations at the University of Denver and Colorado Woman's College. She was devoted to: the improvement of mental health services, advancement of civil rights and educational innovation. She wrote non-fiction articles and collaborated with her husband on articles and books about urban planning and architecture. Their final book was about Evergreen, their adopted hometown. Barbara Sternberg says that writing about Anne Evans was a deeply satisfying excursion into the history of Colorado and of Denver, especially the rich tapestry of its cultural development. Unexpected discoveries about Anne Evans came to light during the research for this book. Barbara expected that more revelations would come to light in the discussion aroused by the publication of this book. Some interesting new discoveries have already appeared and will be shared on the website: <http://www.anne-evans.com>

Jennifer Sternberg Boone

Jennifer Sternberg Boone and her husband Casey opened a specialty sports store in Evergreen, Colorado in 1985. Boone Mountain Sports is today a valued institution oriented to community service. Her many interests include supporting local art, music and dance and assisting young families in parenting – writing is her avocation.
